

I am commenting on the proceeding that will reverse Indiana's law to prevent homeowners from being harassed by businesses in their own homes. I don't feel that businesses have the right to invade my home with propoganda and forceful selling techniques. My home should be my castle, my own sanctuary, a place for me to retreat from all the stress that businesses and corporations put on me everyday. If they feel they have the right to invade my home, then I feel I have a right to see that they have a very bad day!
